

From the depths of America's rust belt come the Soy City Stranglers. Forming in 2008, this five piece has made the most out of their surroundings in the urban wasteland of Decatur, IL and delivered a sonic assault of beer-fueled leather clad intensity not seen since the Regan era. The raging dual guitars, a tight bombastic rhythm section, and the nihilistic spitted vocals of Billy Fury converge into tunes comparable to the finer works of The Dwarves, Poison Idea, and The New Bomb Turks. The boys will be touring across the country until the whiskey runs out. They recorded their self-titled debut with Matt Talbot (Hum, Centaur). They play fast. Enjoy!
